

Souad Dreyfus

MAKING Dreams of Parenthood COME TRUE by Leslie Allen

It is no wonder that couples choose to put their trust in Souad Dreyfus when needing an egg donor or a surrogate to become parents. When I met Souad for the first time she instantly put me at ease without the thought of trying to do so.

When talking with her about her business, Open Arms Consultants, I sensed a real passion for her desire to bring families together with the want of a baby, (their baby), and a love of children that only a mother like herself could understand.

Born in a large traditional Moroccan family, Souad understands the warmth and love that a baby can bring to a family. But Souad also understands hard work and determination and that business savvy is not always achieved from a corporate tower. "My family is the huggy and kissie type. When I came to America, I found out people here are a little more reserved. But, I don't let that change the way I am. I just found a business that lets me be me." A mother herself of a beautiful eleven month

Souad with her
11-month old daughter, Maya

Photo by Keith Baumbaug,
Artful Images & More

old baby girl, Maya, Souad says that her business is now more personal than ever before. “I look at things differently. Not that I wasn’t caring about my client’s want for a baby, but now, when I am holding my daughter I really understand there is no greater miracle and that I have been given this privilege and responsibility.

Before Souad started Open Arms Consultants she gained extensive experience working with a fertility specialist, intended parents, surrogates and egg donors. “I just thought there had to be a better way. The decision and the process of having a baby is a very personal and emotional journey as well as a complicated process. The sterile environment of a doctor’s office wasn’t for me.”

Open Arms Consultants is totally equipped to gently guide intended parents toward uniting with egg donors or surrogates. They work hand-in-hand with reputable fertility specialists, psychologists, and attorneys each familiar with the complexities of the entire process. They handle all services with determination, dedication and the wisdom that comes with experience. Open Arms also coordinates every detail—screening potential donors, locating appealing surrogates, arranging introductions, coordinating medical services, arranging travel details and adding emotional support and compassion at every step.

For Souad Dreyfus, Open Arms Consultants isn’t just a business. It’s a passion that drives her to help those who desire to become parents a reality. Her arms truly are open to making dreams of parenthood come true.